Shulamit RAN

Perfect Storm for solo Viola

Shulamit RAN

Perfect Storm for solo Viola

In spirited gratitude to Melia Watras for her ispirare project, and to my "viola inspiration" — Black is the Color... from Folk Songs (1964) by Luciano Berio

Commissioned by Melia Watras with funding from the Donald E. Petersen Endowed Fellowship at the University of Washington

PROGRAM NOTE

When violist Melia Watras approached me about composing a solo viola piece for her, she presented an idea that added an intriguing extra dimension to this commissioning project. Her hope was to have me create a work that, in some way, alluded to, or made use of, an existing work of my choice from the viola repertoire, enabling both works to be performed side by side.

As I began reviewing, in my head, an imaginary strip of "famous viola licks" (harder to do than with violin or cello...), along with some favorite 19th century music I found myself returning time and again to the central motif, played by viola, from the first song of Luciano Berio's Folk Songs for singer and instruments. This gesture was playing in my mind also through another "filter" – an instrumental ensemble work composed in 1985 by my friend, the Israeli composer Betty Olivero, who was a student and protégé of Berio's and who made recurring use of that particular fragment in her composition Presenze. My memory of her rendition, though quite faint now, seems to have helped etch that lovely little "viola moment" into my mind.

It is always an interesting experience, composing music that aims, from the start, in a pre-determined direction - in this case the Berio motif - yet also aspires to have its own life, quite independently from the source of the quotation.

In the resulting solo viola work, PERFECT STORM, the Berio motif serves as a focal point that, once established, is used as a "return" moment and the point of departure for extended new elaborations. The architectural sweep of the piece may suggest to some a "ritornello" form. In addition to the lyricism and sweetness of the opening materials – mine and Berio's – the landscape covered in the piece includes stretches of music that are intense, dance-like, ferocious, and for a while even suggesting, to its composer at least, "fiddle" playing style.

At the end, I believe that the borrowed materials, the "found object", is thoroughly integrated into my composition, spawning music not readily suggested by the original point of inspiration, yet obviously enabled by that miraculous alchemy that is part of the process of creating music.

— Shulamit Ran

Luciano Berio "Black is the Colour" from "Folk Songs, Nr. 1" © Copyright 1968 by Universal Edition (London), Ltd., London/UE 34112. Used by permission.

O 2011, 2017 by Theodore Presser Company 114-41510

All Rights Reserved Printed in U.S.A. International Copyright Secured

Unauthorized copying, arranging, adapting, recording, or digital storage or transmission is an infringement of copyright. Infringers are liable under the law.

114-41510

114-41510